The screenshot shows a Zoom meeting interface. On the left, a slide titled "Dream of Vishvaguru!" is displayed. The slide contains the following text:

- Indian Culture will spread not so much through the gurus and swamis, but it will spread mainly through the work of intellectuals, writers and specially scientists, who have found certain ideas of our culture convincing and who identify them as their personal beliefs.
- An increasing number of creative teachers/researchers should come forward and consciously and unconsciously blend their scientific and their cultural ideas.
- The urgent need is then to integrate the ancient knowledge of India with the modern curriculum.

Below the list, a quote is shown:

*"There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortunes,
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and miseries."*

• - Shakespeare from Julius Caesar
